

Japanese Language and Literature

Journal of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese

jll.pitt.edu | Vol. 53 | Number 2 | October 2019 | DOI 10.5195/jll.2019.101

ISSN 1536-7827 (print) 2326-4586 (online)

CONTRIBUTORS

Fareed Ben-Youssef is an Assistant Professor in film and media at Texas Tech University. He earned his Ph.D. in film and media studies from the University of California, Berkeley and has published work in L'Avant-Scène Cinéma, Bright Lights Film Journal, Cultural Analysis, The Journal of Popular Culture, Studia Filmoznawcze (Film Studies), and Southwestern American Literature. As part of his efforts to teach outside the classroom, Ben-Youssef has also organized myriad university film series and hosted master classes with a variety of award-winning directors including Ari Folman and Ryūsuke Hamaguchi.

Beth M. Carter (bethmegancarter@gmail.com) is Assistant Professor of Japanese at Case Western Reserve University. Her area of research is mourning rituals and practices in classical Japanese literature with a special emphasis on The Tale of Genji. She has been the recipient of the Fulbright Graduate Research Fellowship (Kyoto, Japan in 2013 and 2015) and the Blakemore Freeman Fellowship for Advanced Asian Language Study (Yokohama, Japan in 2014), among others.

Yoshiki Chikuma (chikuma@cofc.edu) is senior instructor of Japanese and director of Japanese Studies at the College of Charleston. He holds a Ph.D. in foreign language education from Purdue University. His specialization is Japanese language pedagogy and second language acquisition.

New articles in this journal are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 United States License.

This journal is published by the University Library System, University of Pittsburgh as part of its D-Scribe Digital Publishing Program and is cosponsored by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

Andrew Harding (awh74@cornell.edu) is currently a doctoral student at Cornell University where he is in the final stages of completing his thesis. His research addresses the complicity of postwar assumptions regarding ethno-national homogeneity in Japan and Korea with notions of national literature, and the responses this has elicited from Zainichi Korean authors since the late 1960s.

Jon Holt (joholt@pdx.edu) is Associate Professor of Japanese at Portland State University. His research interests include modern Japanese poetry, Japanese Buddhism, and manga. Recent publications include: “What You See Is What You Get: Visualizing Hypocrisy in Umezu Kazuo’s Manga Cat-Eyed Boy” (ImageText, 2019), “X-Rated and Excessively Long: Ji-Amari in Hayashi Amari’s Tanka” (U.S.-Japan Women’s Journal, 2018), “Chocolate Revolutionary: Tawara Machi’s Rule-Breaking Tanka Verses” (Japanese Language and Literature, 2018), and “Literature Short on Time: Modern Moments in Haiku and Tanka” (Routledge Handbook of Modern Japanese Literature, 2016). He has published translations of the poetry of Hayashi Amari (Asymptote web journal, 2015), Yamanokuchi Baku, and Mabuni Chōshin (Islands of Resistance: Japanese Literature from Okinawa, 2016).

Lee Soo Mi (soomicom@hotmail.com) is an independent scholar and third-generation zainichi living in Japan. Her research interests include the relationship between identity (de-)construction and autobiographical writing, fiction writers from historically marginalized communities, and women’s life narratives of survival and empowerment. She received her Ph.D. in East Asian Languages and Cultures at UC Berkeley in 2015.

Hannah Osborne (ho14@soas.ac.uk) completed her doctoral thesis, “Gender, Love and Text in the Early Writings of Kanai Mieko,” at the University of Leeds in 2015. She is currently a research associate at the Japan Research Centre, SOAS, University of London. Her research focuses on intersections between text, illustration and the avant-garde arts; gender and the body; and women’s writing and translation in modern Japanese literature.

Ji Shouse is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Asian Languages and Civilizations at University of Colorado, Boulder. Shouse focuses on Japanese and Korean modernist/experimental literature and visuality in the interwar period.

Marianne Tarcov is a visiting professor of East Asian Languages and Cultures at University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana. She is at work on a book project about the politics of twentieth-century Japanese lyric poetry.