

Japanese Language and Literature

Journal of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese

jll.pitt.edu | Vol. 55 | Number 1 | April 2021 | <https://doi.org/10.5195/jll.2021.200>
ISSN 1536-7827 (print) 2326-4586 (online)

CONTRIBUTORS

Rea Amit (rea.amit-1@ou.edu) is Assistant Professor in the Department of Modern Languages, Literatures and Linguistics at the University of Oklahoma. He holds an M. A. degree in Aesthetics from Tokyo University of the Arts, and a Ph. D. from Yale University. Among his publications are: “On the structure of contemporary Japanese aesthetics,” Philosophy East and West 62(2): 174–185, and “What Is Japanese Cinema?: Imamura Taihei’s Wartime Theory of Japanese Film, Tradition, and Art,” positions 27 (4): 597–621.

Pana Barova-Özcan (pbarovaozc@esu.edu) is an instructor of Japanese at East Stroudsburg University in Pennsylvania. Her research interests include Heian period memoir literature (nikki bungaku), comparative study of women’s writing in Japan and the West, Japanese popular culture, and foreign language pedagogy.

Marjorie Burge (marjorie.burge@colorado.edu) is Assistant Professor of Japanese in the Department of Asian Languages and Civilizations at University of Colorado, Boulder. Her research focuses on written cultures in early Japan and early Korea. Publications include “Wooden Inscriptions and the Culture of Writing in Sabi Paekche” (Asian Perspectives 58.1, spring 2019).

Masami Ikeda (mikeda@mit.edu) is Lecturer of Japanese at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Her research interests include learner autonomy, language proficiency assessment, and academic writing in Japanese.

Gergana E. Ivanova (ivanovga@uc.edu) is Associate Professor of Japanese literature and culture at the University of Cincinnati. Her work focuses on the reception of Heian-period women’s writing over

New articles in this journal are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 United States License.

This journal is published by the University Library System, University of Pittsburgh as part of its D-Scribe Digital Publishing Program and is cosponsored by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

the centuries and early modern erotic and didactic literature. She is the author of Unbinding the Pillow Book: The Many Lives of a Japanese Classic (Columbia University Press, 2018). Ivanova's current book project examines the eroticization of Heian women writers in early modern Japan.

Peter Kvidera (pkvidera@jcu.edu) is Associate Professor of English at John Carroll University in Cleveland, Ohio. He has served as Associate Dean and Interim Dean for the College of Arts and Sciences at John Carroll, as well as the university's director of its Core curriculum. He regularly teaches Japanese literature in translation, as well as a variety of courses in late nineteenth and early twentieth century American literature. He has published essays in such journals as American Literature, American Studies, and MELUS.

Ryan Francis Lidster (lidster@marshall.edu) is a Ph. D. candidate in Second Language Studies at Indiana University, specializing in language assessment and the teaching and acquisition of phonology. His research focuses particularly on the acquisition of L2 Japanese phonemic length. He has taught English and Japanese in the U. S., Canada, and Japan, and currently teaches Japanese and Linguistics in the Modern Languages Department at Marshall University.

Sachiko Matsunaga (smatsunaga@hartnell.edu) is Professor Emerita of Japanese at California State University, Los Angeles, and Dean of Academic Affairs (Languages, Learning Support, and Resources) at Hartnell College. Her research interests include the Japanese writing system, written script processing, and reading processes of Japanese as a native, nonnative, and heritage language.

Otilia Milutin (omilutin@middlebury.edu) is Assistant Professor of Japanese Studies at Middlebury College. She teaches courses in modern and classical Japanese literature and language. She received her Ph. D. from the University of British Columbia and her M. A. from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Her research focuses on representations of sexual violence in Heian and Kamakura court tales (monogatari), as well as on contemporary adaptations of Japanese classics in manga, anime, and film.

Joshua S. Mostow (Joshua.Mostow@ubc.ca) is Professor in the Department of Asian Studies at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada. His most recent monograph is Courtly Visions: The Ise Stories and the Politics of Cultural Appropriation (Leiden: Brill, 2014) and his most recent article “Saigyō and His Poems in Ukiyo-e and Early-Modern Popular Culture,” Andon (Leiden), no. 109 (Spring 2020).

Mika Saito (majo@mse.biglobe.ne.jp) is a researcher at International Christian University, Tokyo. She holds a Ph. D. from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at International Christian University, where she studied Japanese classical literature. She currently teaches academic writing at Meiji Gakuin University and teaches Japanese writing at Tokyo Keizai University. Her latest book, Taketori monogatari kara Kaguya hime e: Monogatari no tanjō to keishō, was published by Tokyodō shuppan in 2020.

Luciana Sanga (luciana.sanga@northwestern.edu) is Visiting Assistant Professor in the Asian Languages and Cultures Department at Northwestern University. She holds a Ph. D. in Japanese literature from Stanford University. Her work has appeared in the Journal of Asian Studies, Review of Japanese Culture and Society, and Proceedings for the Association of Japanese Literary Studies. She is currently completing her book manuscript “The Production of Genre: Love Novels in Contemporary Japanese Culture.”

Kayono Shiba (shib@chiba-u.jp) is Professor of Japanese literature and culture at Chiba University, Japan. She is the author of Dokyōdō no kenkyū 読経道の研究 (A study of the sutra-recital way, Tokyo: Kazama shobō, 2004). Shiba’s research focuses on Japanese medieval literature, representations of Izumi Shikibu in narratives from the twelfth through fifteenth centuries, and ancient and early-medieval Buddhist rituals. Her recent work centers on recreating Buddhist ceremonies.

Christopher Smith (csmith2@ufl.edu) received a Ph. D. in Japanese literature from the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa and is currently an Assistant Professor of Modern Japanese Literature at the University of Florida. His research focuses on contemporary literature (Heisei-Reiwa) and Japanese pop culture, including manga and anime. He is especially interested in examining how literature and culture represents, manipulates, and plays with history and identity. He recently published a translation of Tanaka Yasuo's Somehow, Crystal (Kurodahan Press, 2019).

Peter Tillack (tillack@montana.edu) is Associate Professor of Japan Studies in the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures at Montana State University. His work has focused on naikō no sedai (introspective generation) authors Gotō Meisei and Kuroi Senji. He has published several translations of Kuroi Senji's works in Engaging Banality: Stories of the Salaried Life by Kuroi Senji (Brill, 2017). His current research interests include representations of labor and precarity in contemporary Japanese literature.

Victoria Young (vy202@cam.ac.uk) is the Kawashima Lecturer in Japanese Literature and Culture at the Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, University of Cambridge, and a Fellow of Selwyn College. She is currently writing a monograph that analyses works of fiction by writers from specific categories within Japanese fiction and what they might tell us about the ideas of world literature and translation.