

Japanese Language and Literature

Journal of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese

jll.pitt.edu | Vol. 58 | Number 1 | April 2024 | DOI: 10.5195/jll.2024.361

ISSN 1536-7827 (print) 2326-4586 (online)

CONTRIBUTORS

Mayumi Ajioka (majioka@sbccd.cc.ca.us) is a doctoral candidate in applied linguistics at UCLA. She also teaches Japanese language and culture at California State University, San Bernardino, and Crafton Hills College. Her research interest is in learning Japanese as a foreign language, Japanese heritage speakers, language learning motivation, and native-like speech of Japanese.

Elena Giannoulis (elena.giannoulis@fu-berlin.de) studied Japanese Studies and Literary Studies at the Freie Universität Berlin, Germany, and Keiō University, Japan. In 2009, she received her Ph.D. in Japanese Studies. Currently, she is Professor of Japanese literature at the Department of History and Cultural Studies at the Freie Universität Berlin. Furthermore, she is the Principal Investigator of the ERC research group “Emotional Machines: The Technological Transformation of Intimacy in Japan.” Her fields of interest include contemporary Japanese literature and culture, affects and emotions, human-machine interaction, digital communication as well as forms of attachment and detachment in present-day Japanese society. She is the co-editor of Emoticons, Kaomoji and Emoji: The Transformation of Communication in the Digital Age (Routledge, 2020). In addition, she is a translator of Japanese literature.

Brian Hurley (brian.hurley@austin.utexas.edu) is Assistant Professor in the Department of Asian Studies at the University of Texas at Austin. His book Confluence and Conflict: Reading Transwar Japanese

New articles in this journal are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 United States License.

This journal is published by the University Library System, University of Pittsburgh as part of its D-Scribe Digital Publishing Program and is cosponsored by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

Literature and Thought (Harvard University Asia Center, 2022) received an honorable mention in the Aldo and Jeanne Scaglione Book Prize for East Asian Studies presented by the Modern Language Association. It was also named a finalist in the Modern Japan History Association Book Prize competition. His most recent scholarship appears in articles to be published in 2024 in Comparative Literature Studies, The Journal of Asian Studies, and positions: asia critique.

Junko Tokuda Simpson (jtsimpson@ucsd.edu) is Lecturer in the Japanese Studies Program at the University of California San Diego. Throughout her career, she has taught all levels of Japanese language courses from elementary to advanced level. Her research interests are pedagogy, technology integration in language education, and material development. In 2017, she received the Hamako Ito Chaplin Memorial Award for Excellence in Japanese Language Teaching, and she has been actively involved in activities with local and national teacher/language organizations to enrich Japanese language and cultural education in the United States.