Japanese Language and Literature
Journal of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese
jll.pitt.edu | Vol. 60 | Number 2 | October 2026 | DOI: 10.5195/jll.2026.495
ISSN 1536-7827 (print) 2326-4586 (online)

CONTRIBUTORS

Mayumi Ajioka (mayumi.ajioka@unlv.edu) is Assistant Professor-in-Residence of Japanese in the Department of World Languages and Cultures at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. She earned her Ph.D. in Applied Linguistics from the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) in 2024. Her research interests include Japanese heritage language learning, usage-based language acquisition and instruction, functional linguistics, academic literacy development, and Japanese language pedagogy.

Alan Y. Cheng (ayc@stanford.edu) is a Ph.D. student in the Department of Computer Science at Stanford University. His research lies at the intersection of human-computer interaction and the learning sciences, with a focus on the design and development of interactive learning technologies.

Pelin Çılgın (cilgin@stanford.edu) is a Ph.D. student in the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Stanford University.

Josh Eyre (josheyre@stanford.edu) is a Master's student in Japanese linguistics in the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Stanford University.

Keiko Hata (hatakeik@msu.edu) is Assistant Professor of Japanese at Michigan State University. She holds a PhD in Japanese Linguistics from the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa. Her research interests include Japanese linguistics and pedagogy, AI-supported language learning, and Japanese popular culture.

New articles in this journal are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 United States License.

This journal is published by Pitt Open Library Publishing.

Caleb Langley (okiyoshi@stanford.edu/crlangle@usc.edu) completed a Master's degree in Japanese linguistics in the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Stanford University in 2026.

Huiting Liu (whliu11@stanford.edu) is a Ph.D. student in the Department of Physics at Stanford University.

Scott Mehl (smehl@colgate.edu) is an associate professor of Japanese and Asian Studies at Colgate University, where he teaches Japanese language, literature, and culture. He has published articles on modern Japanese poetry and on topics in comparative literature. His translations of Japanese poetry and criticism have appeared in various venues. He is the author of The Ends of Meter in Modern Japanese Poetry: Translation and Form (Cornell University Press).

Andrew P. Nelson (nelso57@stolaf.edu) is Assistant Professor of Japanese in the Department of Asian Studies at St. Olaf College. He earned his Ph.D. in Japanese from the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Stanford University, with doctoral minors in History and Linguistics. His multidisciplinary research applies semantic analysis, comparative translation, and discourse analysis to the examination of linguistic concepts and categories in modern Japan.

Teisha Nishimitsu (teinish@stanford.edu) graduated with a Bachelor's in Biology and a Minor in East Asian Studies (East Asian Languages focus) from Stanford University in 2026.

Camilla Piana (cpiana@stanford.edu) is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Classics at Stanford University.

Qianhe Qin (qqhe@stanford.edu) is a Ph.D. graduate of the Department of Mathematics at Stanford University in 2026.

Joshua Rogers (joshua.rogers@qc.cuny.edu) is an Assistant Professor of Japanese at the City University of New York, Queens College. He earned his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 2020. His research focuses on the role of religion, esotericism, and secularity in modern Japanese literature.

Gavin Sherry (gsherry3@stanford.edu) graduated with a Bachelor's in Computer Science and a Minor in East Asian Studies (Japan focus) from Stanford University in 2026.

Ariel Stilerman (stilerman@stanford.edu) is Assistant Professor of Premodern Japanese Literature at Stanford University. His book, Court Poetry and the Culture of Learning in Japan (Harvard, 2026), charts the transformation of waka poetry into a vehicle of cultural transmission and a shared language for warriors and merchants. His new project, Meet the People Who Built Japan, explores changing conceptions of work, skill, and craft in early medieval illustrated manuscripts.

Sera Wang (serawang@stanford.edu) graduated with a Master's degree in East Asian Studies from Stanford University in 2026.

Liaoliao Zhang (liaoliao@stanford.edu) is a Master's student in the Center for East Asian Studies at Stanford University.